Ronald Reagan like all politicians wasn't right about everything. He was however spot on about government run healthcare.

When they develop Cancer the private insurance companies deny coverage because of a pre-existing condition (teenage acne)

Explanation, ok I know he is your deregulation hero but: A special procecutor was appointed, a republican imagine that, he convicted McFarlane, for withholding information. North, for obstruction of justice, misleading congress, accepting an illegal gratuity. Poindexter, conspiracy. Cline, for falsifing tax records. He also said that Reagan and Bush new about or at least acquiesced to the scandal. In all 11 people were convicted of crimes.

Fawn Hall,North's secretary testified to shredding documents, and smuggling others out of the NSC in her boots and blouse.

North admitted to lying to congress, destroying evidence, operating US initiatives in violation of law, and participating in a cover up, Reagan called him a "national hero".

As far as presidential scandals go, Iran-Contra is two bit. Not that the subterfuge is a good thing, I came from a profession where playing games with ethics was a one way ticket to disbarment, but nowhere has anyone shown that Reagan knew about the Contra diversion, that was Ollie North's baby.

And even if Reagan knew about it, I'm supposed to get morally outraged about people juking the system to fund those who were opposing Daniel Ortega and that motley band of reds down there? You want me to shed tears for the Sandanistas because some U.S. officials used arms payments to divert money to oppose them in all their communist splendor? Please! Might as well damn Schindler for playing fast and loose to save a thousand or so Jews from the Nazis.

Hey Little Fauss... Good to see you around! Still riding that snotty xl350 around? Getting used to the southern climate yet? I'll bet the winters are easier to handle down there...

Ol' Ronnie was my favorite prez, but I'm a little young still... He shot pretty straight and was a charismatic "no b.s." leader. Best of all he was an AMERICAN!!!He knew what our country stood for and was proud to be our president!! Our current president is ashamed of America and he is ashamed of being an American. That alone should disqualify him... nevermind showing a valid birth certificate.
